INDIAN ACCOUNT

The history of this section of the state in connection with the Indians is of especial interest as it dates from the time Capt. George Weymouth landed on the coast, somewhere along the shore of Knox county, and after making extensive explorations, captured several of the natives whom he took back to Europe with him. We are unable in this brief account to give any details in regard to the many conflicts the early traders in this section had with these red men of the forest, or of their many attacks upon those who took their lives in their hands and left safe communities to make for themselves in the land of the hostile savage, homes and a name that will ever be honored.

This section does not seem to have been the permanent home of any tribe of Indians, although the Tarratines were most frequently in possession. This tribe was a branch of the Warenocks or Etchemin tribe of the eastern part of the state and were at one time perhaps the most powerful tribe in New England. When the trading posts or "truck houses" as they were called, were established here about 1830, the Indians were on friendly terms with the white visitors, and to some extent were pleased to share their spacious territory with them in return for the many beautiful things the adventurers had to offer them. Gradually the true situation dawned upon them and they became aware that their home, the natural wilds, and their liberty, were in danger and from that time until there was no hope in fighting, they held a hostile position to the encroachments of the pale-faced squatters, and often waged futile war with the intention of exterminating this hated people. The complete story has been often and beautifully told. We will only add that this state, where three centuries ago probably the foot of civilized man never trod, but the red man roamed the entire territory in quest of game or fish; today is dotted with innumerable dwellings and factories, and lined with railroads; while on the rivers, lakes and inlets of the sea the red man's canoe has been completely displaced by the sailing craft and steamers of civilized man, while the native race has become a memory only. True and pathetic are the words of Charles Sprague:

"Alas for them, their day is o'er,
Their fires are out from hill and shore;
No more for them the wild deer bounds,
The plow is on their hunting grounds;
The pale man's axe rings through their woods,

The pale man's sail skins o'er their floods :
Cold with the beast he slew, he sleeps ;
O'er him no filial spirit weeps ;
No crowds throng round, no anthem notes ascend
To bless his coming and embalm his end ;
E'en that he lived, is for his conqueror's tongue,
By foes alone his death song must be sung."

EXPLORATIONS AND LAND GRANTS.

Few sections of the state are of more historical interest than that lying around the mouths of the great water courses, the earliest thoroughfares of the redmen, as also of his palefaced kinsman who succeeded him in the land. These highways of travel were often pursued by war parties of natives ; later, when war waged between the English settlers and the French : and still later, when we were at enmity with those with whom we had earlier stood side by side against a common foe. These humble and peace loving pioneers were often in great danger of becoming exterminated, when they were forced to bring every resource into action to face the dangers and the stern realities of a pioneer life.

It is generally conceded that Capt. George Weymouth, an English navigator who sought a northwest passage to China, is the first European who visited the locality at the mouth of the Penobscot river, in 1605. We have no means of knowing who were the European visitants to these wild shores between that date and 1614, although the mountains of Camden served as a landmark to many voyagers, being often mentioned in their reports.

The famous Capt. John Smith is the next whom we have authority to say explored these shores. He sailed from London, Mar. 3, 1614, and arrived at Monhegan the last of April. Building several boats here, with eight of his men, he ranged the coast from Penobscot to Cape Cod, making observations and trading with the Indians. Smith, after returning to England, published a book describing his voyage and speaks of an Indian settlement at Camden called Macadueat. He wrote "The most northern point I was at was the bay of Penobscot. * * * * I found in the bay that the river ran far up into the land, and was well inhabited by many people, but they were from their habitations, either fishing among the Isles or hunting the lakes and woods for deer and beavers." Doubtless this settlement was only the temporary habitation of a band of the Wawnoek Indians. There is now no trace to indicate where these tenants dwelt. Smith's object in publishing this book was to induce the people of England to form a colony, which, had he been successful, might have made this vicinity instead of Plymouth the nucleus of New England, but no settlements are known to have been made until after the lapse of over a century and a half.

The Muscongus Patent was granted by the Council of Plymouth to John Beauchamp of London, and Thomas Leverett of Boston, March 13, 1629. The limits of the Patent extended from the river Muscongus to Penobscot river on the seaboard, and ran back far enough to embrace an extent of territory equal to 30 square miles. On the death of Beauchamp, Leverett as survivor succeeded to the estate. In 1719 John Leverett, who was then president of Harvard College, representing himself as sole heir of his grandfathers estate, came into possession of the whole Patent. Finding it difficult to establish his claim as sole proprietor, he divided the estate into ten shares, granted one share to a son of Gov. Bradford, one share to an adopted son of Sir Wm. Phipps who brought into the company the Indian deed which his father had bought of Madocawando in 1694, and thus secured the title the Tarretines claimed in the territory—two shares to Elisha Cook, and one each to four others, descendants of Thomas Leverett, holding two shares himself. These were known as the “ten proprietors.” Soon after this twenty others became associated with them, when they were called the “Thirty Proprietors.”

After the treaty of Utrecht, one David Dunbar, Surveyor General of the Woods to His Majesty, claimed a quit rent for the king. Fearing the loss of their right to the territory the thirty proprietors engaged the services of Brig. Samuel Waldo to go to England to obtain a relinquishment of the claims presented. After untiring application at court he succeeded in getting Dunbar removed, and in accomplishing his mission. On his return the thirty proprietors joined in surrendering to him for his service one half of the Patent. In 1732 Waldo caused his portion to be set off, and by sending agents to Germany who held out attractive inducements to emigrants, soon formed quite a German colony at Broad Bay. Tradition says that Waldo died while locating the bounds of his Patent, in the vicinity of Eddington Bend.

A short time previous to Waldo's death, it was agreed to dissolve the partnership existing between the different parties owning the then Muscongus grant, but the necessary surveys were not made until after the death of Waldo. The Ten Proprietors and the Twenty Associates, as these two companies became designated, had agreed to accept as their proportion 100,000 acres each. The surveyors were delayed from year to year, until 1766, when John Jeffries, one of the twenty associates, and the heirs of others, by petition obtained a warrant to call a meeting of the proprietors. The meeting was called on the 6th of Sept. when sixteen of the original twenty associates were represented. They chose a committee to confer with the heirs of Gen. Waldo respecting the 100,000 acres belonging to them and to report. This resulted in the selection by the Twenty Associates, of the territory now included in Camden, Rockport, Hope, Appleton, Montville and a part of Liberty. This was surveyed and set off, the deed bearing the date April 7, 1768.

It was not until 1773 that the ten Proprietors had their portion set off by the Waldo heirs, when, instead of the 100,000 acres, they accepted 90,000 in one entire tract. They, supposing the Patent extended as far back as Bangor, selected Frankfort, part of Monroe, the whole of Hampden, and a large part of Bangor; but when the boundaries of the Patent were established it was found that the northern line of Frankfort was the northern limit of the Patent. Thus the Ten Proprietors lost all they claimed except about 43,000 acres. Redress was sought but the Proprietors never obtained any satisfaction for their loss.

The rest of the Muscongus Grant, containing about 400,000 acres and including the territory south of that allotted to the Twenty Associates, lying between the Penobscot and the Muscongus rivers, fell to the Waldo heirs, which was finally set off in a deed of severance about 1773, when it took the name of Waldo Patent.

EARLY SETTLEMENTS IN CAMDEN AND ROCKPORT

In 1768 "The Twenty Associates" or "the Lincolnshire Company," as they were sometimes called, had the plantation subsequently known as Camden, surveyed by David Fales, Esq., of Thomaston. The boundaries then determined upon have since been somewhat changed. According to his survey, the township was six miles in length, by five miles and sixty-two rods in width.

According to this measurement, Camden mountains were then embraced in Canaan, or Lincolnville, as it is now called. The strip of territory north of the above mentioned line was ceded to Camden by Canaan, before Camden was incorporated, in answer to the prayer of certain petitioners, who wished to be set off because of the close proximity of the harbor village.

The other boundaries were nearly the same as are described in the first act of incorporation. The southeast corner is indicated by a rock marked A. X. on the north side of Owl's Head bay. From thence, according to the act of incorporation the line runs "northwest by north seven miles and sixty-four poles," which brings it to the southern corner of Hope. Thence it runs "northeast five miles and ninety-four poles," which brings it to the eastern corner of Hope, and then takes in the ceded territory by "running east three miles and a half and twenty poles to a spruce tree;" thence it runs "southeast by south one mile to Little Ducktrap," and "thence by the sea shore in a westerly direction to the bounds first mentioned,"—at Owl's Head bay. According to these limits, Camden contained 23,500 acres which remained unchanged until the division of the town in 1891.

In 1767 James Richards moved his family from a place on the Piscataqua river, N. H., to Bristol, Maine, where he resided until 1768, during which year he came down to the then wilderness of the township of Camden at the Harbor, then known by the Indians under the name of Negunticook, or Megunticook, as it is now spelled, where he erected a rude log hut. The following spring, May 1769, Mr. Richards embarked in a vessel with his family, bound for his destined home. As they entered the harbor, (on the 8th of May) the African cook pointed to the island at the entrance and exclaimed, "Dare,—dat's my island!" and it was thenceforth known as Negro Island.

At that time there were a few Indians' wigwams on what is now called Eaton's point, and also on Beauchamp point. The Indians were always friendly, but Mrs. Richards used sometimes to feel somewhat alarmed as they came to the cabin in the absence of her husband to grind their tomahawks upon the grind-stone at the door.

The same year Mr. Richards' two brothers, Joseph and Dodapher, joined him. In the following July Robert Thorndike, who was born in Beverly, but then lived in Portland, came and settled at Goose River—now Rockport. He brought with him seven children. Mr. Thorndike possessed a tolerable knowledge of the place before, as he had been here two or three years previous with his vessel to cut timber. The next settler who followed Mr. Richards at the harbor was Maj. William Minot, of Boston, who settled at the foot of Megunticook stream, upon which he erected the first grist and saw mill. His house was the first framed house erected in Camden. Lewis Ogier, of French descent, came next,—from Quebec. Mr. Thorndike at Rockport, was next joined by his brother Paul, and James Simonton, and afterwards by John Harkness, Peter Ott, Jno. Ballard and others. Also near the same time, William Gregory, Mark Buckland, William Porterfield and William Upham settled at Clam Cove.

From this time, the settlement gradually began to increase until the commencement of the Revolution, when immigration ceased.

Robert Thorndike was the first white male child born in Camden, including Camden and Rockport. He was born at Goose River (Rockport) Sept. 17, 1773.

During the Revolution a number of the settlers returned to their former homes, but upon the conclusion of peace the tide of immigration again turned toward the Province of Maine. Efforts were made to procure settlers by the twenty associates, who made an agreement with Chas. Barrett, of Ipswich, N. H., to procure settlers. Barrett was to build a meeting house, a school house, and to obtain forty settlers to locate in the present town of Hope and the western part of Camden. Among those who availed themselves of the attractive inducements which were offered, and who located in that territory mentioned were: the Saffords, Philbricks, Barretts, Mansfields, Hodgmans, Russells, Hosmers and Appletons. Many of these came here in 1785 and 1786. Samuel Appleton came from Boston, accompanied by several others, and erected a log hut where a number of his associates lived with him until they were able to make clearings for themselves. Nathaniel Hosmer was one of these. He came from Mason, N. H., and finally settled on the place known as the old Hosmer place. He erected a cabin near the pond, and the following summer erected a frame house. Job Hodgman, who married Hosmer's sister, came that spring, and soon after, Asa Hosmer, Nathaniel's brother, with two other sisters; then came Samuel Russell and John Sartelle who married these sisters, Eunice and Tabatha, and settled in the vicinity. William Molyneaux, who took a very prominent part in developing the early town, about 1786, purchased of the Lincolshire Company the whole of Beauchamp Neck and other parcels of land at the Harbor, together with the land at the foot of the pond, and erected a grist mill and a saw mill on the stream at the outlet of the lake.

Up to the year 1790 there was not a passable road in the plantation of Camden three miles in length. There was a foot path running from St. George through Camden to Sandy Neck, in Prospect; this at first was indicated only by a line of spotted trees through the unbroken forest. On the 10th of Nov. 1790, a road was laid out extending from Thomaston, now Rockland, to Camden Harbor, and thence to "Little Duck Trap" which is the first road we find any record of in the town.

INCORPORATION

Up to the year 1791 Camden was only known as a plantation, defined as being in the County of Hancock, *Province of Maine, and Commonwealth of Massachusetts. The appellation of Negunticook, or Mengunticook, up to this time was sometimes given to the whole plantation, but generally it was applied to the settlement at the harbor, of which place the name is most happily suggestive.

On the 17th of February, 1791, "the plantation of Camden" became incorporated as the 72d town in the state. The name of Camden was bestowed upon the township by the Twenty Associates, in honor of Lord Camden, a parliamentary friend of the colonists prior to, and during the Revolutionary war.

The first town meeting was held at the inn of Peter Ott, on the 4th of April, 1791. The officers there chosen were: William Gregory, moderator; John Harkness, town clerk; John Harkness, 1st selectman; William Gregory, 2d selectman; William McGlathry, 3d selectman; Paul Thorndike, constable; Nathaniel Palmer, tax collector; Joseph Eaton, treasurer.

After disposing of the ordinary town business they proceeded to vote for William Lithgow, Esq., for Representative to Congress, casting thirty-two votes. John Hancock for Governor, and Samuel Adams for Lieut. Gov. each received twenty-six votes.

In 1782 we find there was a law in force authorizing the selectmen to warn all new comers or transient persons out of town who had not made application to the proper town authorities for the purpose of becoming permanent residents. On one precept, served Jan. 2nd, 1792, we find the names of twenty-two men, women, and children who were thus "warned out of town." Among this number were the names of several who were afterwards considered among the first citizens of the town in wealth and respectability. The object of this law was to prevent persons becoming chargeable as paupers to any place: It was a relic of England, but was not long continued. At this time there was but one pauper in town. She was kept by different persons for 10s. per week.

During the year 1794 a postoffice was established in town, with Joseph Eaton as postmaster. This office was in the house known as the old Eaton house, situated on Eaton's Point. Geo. Russell of Castine, was mail-carrier, traversing the route from St. George to Sandy Point and back about once a week. When within about half a mile of the postoffice the carrier heralded his approach by sounding a post-horn. Mr. Eaton was succeeded as postmaster by John Hathaway who was followed by Benjamin Cushing.

In the town records of March 4, 1800, there was an article, "To see what the town will do in regard to setting off a part of Camden joining the northerly part of Thomaston to make another town." A committee was appointed and the survey made, but no definite action was taken on the article afterward. The dividing line as surveyed, was to commence between Goose River, (Rockport), and Clam Cove, and run northerly to the Hope line.

1823. The first steamboat that sailed eastern waters commenced to visit Camden. Her name was the "Maine," Capt. Daniel Lunt, Commander. She was of about 125 tons burden and plied between Bath and the Penobscot ports.

1832. The town voted to build a town-house "forty by thirty-two feet, one story high." The first town meeting held in this house was on Sept. 9th, 1833. Previous to this the meetings were held sometimes in private houses, sometimes in school houses, sometimes in the church.

1835. The town voted to choose Hon. Jos. Hall as agent to solicit the U. S. engineer to survey a route to Camden Harbor for the Canada Railroad. Many believed the road would come here, but their dream was not realized.

1836. The Megunticook Bank was chartered, with Wm. Carlton, pres., Warren Rawson, Esq., cashier. Capital stock, $50,000.

1840. A postoffice was established at Goose River, Silas Piper, postmaster.

In the month of May, 1852, the citizens of Goose River decided to change the name of their village and postoffice, choosing the name of Rockport as one most appropriate to the locality; this choice met with some criticism from their well meaning neighbors at Rockland, but the name was retained and has become dear to its every citizen.

On Feb. 25, 1891, a division of the town was made, the northern part being set off to form a new town but taking the name of the old town—the southern portion, or the town proper taking the name of Rockport.

MILITARY MATTERS

The military history of Camden and Rockport is brilliant with the noble achievements of the many brave sons who have so readily responded to the call of the nation in time of need. Also at the breaking out of the Revolutionary war the settlers located here with 2 or 3 exceptions were found to be of the band of patriots who were ready to fight for their liberty, and to die if need be that those who already had so many hardships to contend with, might not have the added burden of excessive and unfair taxation. From its situation on the bay and its accessible harbor, Camden was the scene of several deprivations perpetrated by the Tories and British troops. The vicinity was often frequented by "savage-mills," as the barges of British marauders were called, in which they came to plunder the settlers of their cattle, sheep and poultry, and frequently committing personal outrages. Many are the interesting accounts of skirmishes had, but we must mention only one: About 1779, Megunticook, as Camden was then called, was visited by the enemy. An American coaster was pursued by a British barge. The coaster, containing about a dozen men, was run ashore at Ogier's Cove, when the alarm was given to Leonard Metcalf, residing in that vicinity, who alarmed the neighboring settlers. They soon came to the rescue, and secreting themselves in ambush with the vessel's crew, awaited the approach of the enemy. When within shooting distance, a volley from three of the settler's guns held them in check. Metcalf then ran out from the thicket and fired at them, when he would run back, load again, and repeat the act. The enemy thus being held in check did not dare advance for fear of their lives, and soon concluded to withdraw. The next day, the settlers supposing the enemy would return to take the prize when the tide should be favorable, mustered those in the vicinity of Goose River, and awaited their appearance, but the English did not think it proper to renew the attempt. On the next rising tide the vessel sailed from the harbor.

The British took possession of Biguyduce (Castine) on the 12th of June, 1779, and Massachusetts formed the scheme to dislodge them. A force of 1200 men were to be raised in the counties of Cumberland and Lincoln, which latter included Camden at that time. Among those who enlisted from this place the names of Wm. Gregory, Peter Ott, Andrew Wells, and Leonard Metcalf appear on the pay-roll. The expedition against Biguyduce was unsuccessful and several men were lost. The troops were somewhat scattered, one division of the main force following the shore and passing through Belfast and Camden. Before this expedition Gen. Geo. Ulmer, of Ducktrap, threw up a slight timber breastwork on the summit of Pine Hill, and after this defeat Camden was looked to for protection by the settlers all along the Penobscot river. As soon as the British gained possession of the Peninsula, Captain Brewer and others with their families from all along the river procured a passage on a vessel to Camden, of which Gen. Ulmer took command. The inhabitants of Belfast, rather than take the oath of allegiance to Great Britain, left their homes, to a man, and came to Camden. About half-a-dozen families remained here while the others went on to Warren, Saco, Bristol, New Hampshire and Massachusetts. Most of those who halted at Camden, found quarters at Clam Cove, at the homes of Tollman, Gregory, and others: and at the Harbor at Mr. Richards', and at the River, at the house of Mr. Thorndike, and others. None were safe here until the close of the war, when many returned to their former homes, but to find that their houses, in many instances, lay in ashes.

In 1812 Camden again found herself in the midst of war. Space forbids that we give in detail the accounts of the many interesting events which took place in this vicinity, the many deeds of valor performed by those of the citizens of Camden who took so active part in the coast defences and in general hostilities. After the call for militiamen, 2,500 of which were Maine's appointment, this town appointed a "Committee of Public Safety," and at the same time voted "Unanimously that every Citizen (whether exempt from military duty or not) forthwith arm and equip himself for actual service, to be ready at a moment's warning to assist in repelling foreign invasions or any emergency for the defence of the Town." The same spirit continued throughout the war. Many coasting vessels from Camden were attacked, and several captured by the British privateers; while, in turn, these hardy seamen aided in the capture, or defeat, of the British rovers. Several Companies were formed in Camden including citizens from Thomaston, Hope, Warren, and St. George. The names of the officers of these companies in 1814 were as follows: Of the Light Infantry Co., Calvin Curtis, Capt.; Edward Hanford, Lieut.; Arthur Pendleton, Ensign; Wm. Brown, 1st Sergeant; Simeon Tyler, 1st Corp.; numbering including officers, 27 men. Of the 1st Infantry Co., Asha Palmer, Capt.; Noah Brooks, Lieut.; Joseph Hall, Ensign. Of the 2nd Infantry Co., of West Camden, Samuel Tolman, Capt.; James Packard, Lieut. These companies belonged to the 5th Regiment of which Erastus Foote, of Camden, was Colonel, or chief in command. Of the Cavalry Co. Isaac Barnard was Captain; being later succeeded by Philip Ulmer.

During the month of July of this year, a party of the enemy was dispatched in the night time from two armed ships lying at the mouth of St. George's river, and proceeded to the fort below Thomaston. At the fort, where they met with no resistance, they destroyed the munitions of war and six cannon, set fire to the buildings and one vessel, and towed away two others. Thence they proceeded up the river toward Thomaston, but were dissuaded from their course. These manoeuvres of the enemy in adjacent territory induced the citizens of Camden to take the utmost precaution against an attack. Guards were stationed from Camden harbor to Clam Cove, and the strictest military surveillance maintained. Two fortifications were erected and garrisoned at the harbor, one on Jacob's Point, and one on Eaton's Point. Also an 18-pounder that had been spiked by the enemy at Fort George was brought and planted on the top of Mt. Batty; a barrack was erected on the mountain and the necessary munitions of war provided. The men who were stationed on the mountain were Corporal Jonathan Leighton, Jesse Derry, Isaac Sheldon, James Metcalf and Robert Corthell, privates.

In Aug. 1814 the U. S. corvette, Adams, ran ashore on the Isle au Haute. After being gotten off in a critical condition, she left 25 men, disabled by scurvy, and about 60 prisoners, at Camden, and sailed up the river to Hampden, where she was attacked soon after by a British fleet from Halifax. Space forbids a recital of this interesting battle, in which the noble patriots, under General Blake were ingloriously defeated. The Adams was burned by her gallant commander, and a scene of pillage and wanton destruction ensued, such as has never occurred elsewhere in the state in civilized warfare.

Many other interesting events took place in Camden before peace was restored in Dec. 1814, but we must add only the names of a few citizens who played important parts in the war, either as home guards, local privateers, or in the general service. Asa Richards and Peter Oat, son of Peter Ott, Paul Thorndike, who was captured and imprisoned at Dartmoor, Eng.; Capt. Stephen Rollins; Lieut. Isaac Russ; Asa Sartelle; Capt. Chesley Blake, afterward commander of the first steamboat that plied between Detroit and Buffalo, on Lake Erie; Adj. Wm. Carlton; Wm. Tarr; Capt. Wm. Blake; Wm. Metcalf; Richard Conway; John Tarr; and others.

At the breaking out of the Civil war the town was found among the most loyal in the state, while the men she sent into the field performed many deeds of valor that caused their names to stand out among those who won honor to themselves and victory for the Union and Liberty. The total number of men sent by the town of Camden, then embracing both Rockport and Camden, was 458. We are unable to say how many of these were residents of the part now incorporated in the town of Rockport. We must not give the whole list of soldiers for space forbids.

INDUSTRIAL ACCOUNT

The first industry to be conducted in the territory comprising the entire town of old Camden, now Camden and Rockport, was the saw and grist mill built by Maj. William Minot, in 1767, on Megunticook stream. Previous to this the settlers carried their corn upon their backs through the woods to Warren. Minot's mill, in turn, was resorted to by the settlers of Union and Belfast. Most of the early pioneers secured their means of subsistence by farming, fishing, or hunting. About 1786, Wm. Molyneaux, Esq., of Boston, erected two mills, a grist mill and a saw mill, on the stream at the foot of Canaan, or Molyneaux's Pond. We will here quote from the journal of Rev. Paul Coffin, D. D., of Buxton, who preached here. He wrote under date of Aug. 15, 1796: "Camden, formerly Megunticook. Squire McGlathry treated me with true and simple politeness and hospitality. This is a place beautiful for situation, and promising for trade. The harbor, a mill for boards and corn on a fresh stream, and the adjacent gently rising lands, made a good appearance, and are quite convenient. The back country, east and west, have no market but this. One ship and a schooner have this year been launched here, and six or seven heavy vessels are on the stocks. The roads are here beaten and worn. The place looks more like home, and a seat of trade, than Ducktrap, Northport, or Belfast. Eight years have done all this. The squire has sold one-fourth of an acre of land for $100. About fifteen neat houses, some large, with other buildings, make the appearance of a compact town. The harbor is full of pleasant islands." We can give no better picture of the town at that time than the above.

This town, we believe, was one of the first in the state to be supplied with a water system. In 1800, Micah and Wm. Hobbs came from Princeton, Mass., and contracted with Jacob Reed to lay an aquaduct from a spring at the base of the mountain to the Harbor village. This was a stock company, but was generally participated in by the people of the village. Between 1812 and 1818 another conduit was laid leading from a spring in James Richard's field, from which the more southerly part of the village was supplied with water.

Gen. Nathaniel Estabrook established salt works on Beauchamp Neck at an early date, about 1825, which was the principal, if not the only industrial establishment in that part of the town. This, however, was not a paying investment and was not long continued. Ebenezer H. Barrett and John Swann erected a paper mill at a cost of $5000 where they manufactured forty dollars' worth of paper per day. In 1841 the mill was burned.

LIME INDUSTRY

The lime industry in this town, like several others in this county, has been a leading one. It has been the means of the growth of the leading places in this region. This industry coupled with the shipbuilding and ice industry has furnished Rockport's industrial life.

Away back in the time of General Knox who lived in Thomaston, lime rock was hauled away from this town. The harbor was very advantageously formed for this industry, and the lime rock jugged so close to the water's edge that it was more easily obtainable than at any other point about Penobscot Bay. Tradition, at least, has it that lime rock was hauled away from Rockport harbor even before the product of the first quarry at Thomaston, which has in later years come to bear the name of the Prison Quarry. However much truth there may be in the tradition we are unable to state. But we know that from the very earliest time the lime industry has to a greater or lesser degree demanded the attention of the people of this town.

The history of lime burning in Rockport may be divided into two different periods,—the days before the advent of the patent kiln and the period since that time, not far from 1850.

In the time previous to the patent kiln the industry was confined to the farms and individual plants. Nearly every farm in the town had a lime kiln, and every farmer made the work of quarrying and burning lime a part of the work of the farm every year. Traces of these old kilns are still visible on nearly all farms in town.

The advent of the patent kiln, as before stated (about 1850) sounded the knell of the old fashioned wood kiln and of the individual effort at the industry. The patent kiln enabled the operator to keep the work moving continually, and much more rapidly, thus turning out a larger product.

In the old days prior to 1854 some of the leading men in the business were as follows: Browns, Barretts, Robert and

Paul Thorndyke, Eben Thorndyke. About the time of the advent of the patent kiln those engaged in the business along the shore of the bay were as follows :

H. A. Barrows; Carleton, Norwood & Co.; Alexander Martin; Comfort Barrows; Mr. Sweetland; Joseph Andrews; Robert and Patrick McLaughlin; Paul Thorndyke; Eben Thorndyke; ——— Graffam; John Harkness; William Brown; Jotham Shepherd; Amos and Samuel Barrett; John and Charles Barrett.

When the patent kiln came into use the following concerns did the most of the business: Carleton, Norwood & Co.; A. Martin; William and Elbridge Carleton; G. F. Burgess; David Talbot; E. Merriam; Jotham Shepherd; Christopher Young; Granville E. Carleton; and John H. Eells.

The quarrying of the rock was in some respects a separate industry from that of burning the rock. Some concerns quarried the rock alone and some both quarried and burned the rock. The electric road which has been installed, has been of immense value in transporting the rock from the quarry to the kiln. Carleton, Norwood & Co. were the chief quarriers before the patent kiln.

In 1900 a new move was made in the lime industry by the formation of a combination in the business known as the "Syndicate." The Rockport concerns who sold their property to the new concern were: S. E. & H. L. Shepherd; Carleton, Norwood & Co.; and G. E. Carleton. J. H. Eells at Simonton has continued an independent business.

It is a hard matter to state with accuracy the actual number of hands employed in the lime industry in this town, as the work varies each year and numerous things enter to make it a hard matter to estimate the number of employees, but it has been estimated that the usual force in town is not far from 200 men. It is very easily seen that the prosecution to full capacity of this industry means much to the town.

SHIPBUILDING

Rockport has also been one of the leading towns in this section for shipbuilding. The Eells shipyard, we are told, was the first of importance in Rockport, with the date 1841 or thereabout.

Carleton, Norwood & Co. have been the largest shipbuilders in town. This concern has averaged to build about one vessel per year since they have been in the business. The largest vessel built in the Rockport yards was the Frederick Billings built by Carleton, Norwood & Co. in 1885. She had the following dimensions: 2628 tons gross, 2497 net, 281 feet long, 44 feet beam, and 20 feet deep.

This concern has employed about 40 men; sometimes more than that number. The shipbuilding industry has not been so important as the lime business, but furnishes much employment and presents a means of drawing business in large degree.

Other shipbuilders have been: David Talbot, John & Chas. Barrett, Albert S. Eells, John Pascall, Mr. Patrick Simonton and others. In fact, in the earlier days almost anyone who had means and favorable location built smaller vessels for the carrying or fishing trade.

ICE BUSINESS

For many years the manufacture of ice for the local market and for southern ports has been a source of much benefit to the town industrially. The supply is secured from a sheet of water locally known as Lily Pond which is very largely fed from springs, insuring a very excellent supply of ice. The supply of ice is not far from 40,000 tons per acre as cut from this pond. The principal operators in this region are the Rockport Ice Co. Those engaged to any extent in the business before the consolidation into the Rockport Ice Co. were: Pitts & Hobbs, probably the first; William and Elbridge Carleton; Messrs. Talbot, Rust, Gould & Barrett Co.

The output of this region has been greatly curtailed by the recently invented process of freezing ice by mechanical methods.

PENOBSCOT VIEW GRANGE.

Penobscot View Grange is a new organization in the place. It was organized March 24, 1902 by State Master, Obadiah Gardner and County Deputy F. A. Perry, Jr., with 27 charter members.

The first officers of this Grange were: Frank H. Ingraham, Master; Parks Bunker, Charles A. Sylvester, Henry J. Billings, Hiram M. Gregory, Lizzie E. Gregory, Margaret Billings, James E. Rhodes 2d, Lendon C. Jackson, S. Louise Shaw, Bell M. Gregory, Hattie A. Buker, Ava W. Jackson.

The remaining charter members were: Elizabeth H. Ingraham, Susan F. Studley, Della A. Flanders, Frank B. Miller, Herbert N. Brazier, Clara W. Brazier, Bessie A. Hewett, Lizzie F. Sylvester, Laura S. Sylvester, Melinda G. Hall, Mary Lane Herrick, Benjamin H. Hall, Olive J. Magune, Emily V. Hall.

The present officers are: Frank H. Ingraham, Master; Herbert N. Brazier, Overseer; Charles A. Sylvester, Lecturer; William H. Larrabee, Steward; Will W. Smith, Assistant Steward; Elizabeth H. Ingraham, Chaplain; Alfred Murry, Treasurer; Herbert W. Keep, Secretary; William A. Lampson, Gate Keeper; Melinda G. Hall, Ceres; Cretia F. Larrabee, Pomona; Lizzie F. Sylvester, Flora; Helen E. Flanders, Lady Asst. Steward.

Present membership is 101. This society meets every Thursday at 7.30 o'clock, P. M.

PROFESSIONAL MEN.

PHYSICIANS.

The first physician of whom we have record in town was Dr. Isaac Barnard, who came to the Harbor about 1787. Here he remained five or six years and married a Miss Tollman; he then removed to the River where he remained but a short time, moving out of town.

Later physicians have been H. B. Eaton, Sr.; Dr. Havenner; O. E. Ross; Dr. Frank Piper; H. B. Eaton, Jr.; H. E. Abbott; S. Y. Wiedman; Mrs. Clara B. Wiedman; and Mrs. Julia W. Haney.

LAWYERS.

Rockport has not been favored with an unusually large number of members of the bar. So far as we have been able to learn the lawyers who have lived in Rockport have been N. T. Talbot, John S. Foster, G. H. M. Barrett, Benjamin Foster, Mr. Moody, and Frank H. Ingraham.

CHURCH AFFAIRS.

The earliest account of the church in this town is not strictly to the credit of the town, although perhaps not so much to their discredit as would appear. The earliest mention of the church in the town records we believe is under date of 1794 when the article was inserted in the town warrant "To see what the town will do in regard to an indictment against them for neglecting for the space of three years last past to procure and maintain as the law obliges a settled ordained minister."

A committee was appointed to contest the case before the Supreme Court held in Hallowell but decision was made that the town should pay the full fine, 2 pounds, 14 shillings, 6 pence. This state of affairs may have been pardonable, however, to some degree for the scarcity of ministers in this section of the state at this time is demonstrated by a letter written by the Hon. Gen. Lincoln, relating to the "Religious state of the Eastern Counties of the District of Maine," dated at Boston, Feb. 10. 1790, in which it is stated, "There are not more than three ordained ministers from Penobscot river to Passamaquoddy, an extent of more than one hundred miles." Whatever the cause of this state of affairs may have been it is true that the demand generally creates a supply, and we believe the town had no difficulty in finding a preacher. At the next annual town meeting it was voted "To raise 30 pounds for the support of the Gospel."

On Feb. 4, 1795, the "20 Associates of the Lincolnshire Company" donated to the town "the ministerial lot No. 57; and the school lot, No. 58, adjoining. The first church erected was located on the ministerial lot, we are unable to state the exact date but it was very soon after the above time. Among the early preachers who officiated here were the Reverends: Elisha Shaw, Isaac Case, John Whitney, Joseph Richards, Paul Coffin, John Lathrop, Phineas Pillsbury, Joshua Hall, Joshua Wells, Robt. Yellalee, Aaron Humphrey, and Ephraim Stinchfield. None of these were appointed pastors of the Camden church but officiated in the several churches in this section. We will now take up the history of the churches located in that part which is now Rockport.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

In 1836-7 a Sabbath school was established at Goose River by two members of the Camden Congregational church, Deacons Stetson and Cobb. There was at that time neither church nor Sunday school of any denomination in the village. Soon after this Mr. W. M. Swan, a Methodist brother from the Harbor joined them bringing a small collection of books which he had for his children. These books were bought for a Sunday School library. In 1842 the Methodists drew off from the rest and formed a distinct school by themselves. In 1843 the Universalist members followed the example of the Methodists. In 1850 the Baptists did the same. In 1850 the Baptists and Congregationalists each built them a house for worship. The Universalists had already erected a meeting house but we were unable to learn the exact date. Later the Episcopalians formed themselves into a church body and worshipped in the church built by the Universalists. Neither the Universalists nor the Episcopalians have an organization in the place at the present time.

The Congregational church was organized March 2, 1854. They built a chapel on their present lot the following fall and winter. Through the faithful efforts of the ladies of the parish they were able to engage a pastor. The ladies pledged themselves to raise $50 the first year, having organized themselves into a sewing circle. The church grew from small membership to a prosperous organization, but the membership has of late been diminishing on account of the removal of many of its members and supporters until now they are unable to support a regular pastor.

Those who have served the church as pastors since its organization, together with the dates of their coming, are as follows: Rev. J. B. Howard, 1854; Rev. A. L. Skinner, 1855; Rev. J. E. M. Wright, 1856-64; Rev. Henry Farrar, 1865; Rev. A. J. Smith, 1866; from this date to 1888 there are no records of the doings of the church. We understand from the later records that the church was supplied by several preachers during that time. In 1888 Rev. Mr. Tyler of Camden preached here part of the year, and the year following; Rev. Mr. Strong, 1891; Rev. Mr. Haughton, 1891-2; Rev. J. J. Walker, 1893; Rev. Mr. Kennison, 1894-5; and

Rev. C. W. Fisher, 1895-8. Since that time the church has been without a regular pastor.

METHODIST CHURCH.

From the records of the Methodist church we learn that the first Methodist preacher here was Rev. Joshua Hall, who preached in Rockport in 1801. This place was then a part of the Union circuit remaining so until 1827. From that time until 1838 it belonged to the Thomaston circuit. In 1848 the East Maine Conference was organized and Camden became a mission. Rev. John Prince was appointed pastor, and built the first church at Goose River, now Rockport. In 1852 a church was organized at Camden village, and Rockport became a separate charge and has since remained so. In the years 1872-3 while Rev. Chas. Knowles was pastor, the old church was moved to the adjoining lot and a new modern church built on the old site. The parsonage was built in 1857 by Rev. A. C. Godfrey. The following is a list of the faithful men who have served the denomination as preachers here: Reverends, Joshua Hall, 1801; Joseph Baker; Daniel Ricker, 1802-3; Daniel Stinson, 1804; Samuel Wilman, 1805-6; Pliny Bret, 1805; J. Weston, 1806; S. Baker, 1807; John Williamson, 1808-9; Benj. Jones, 1809; David Stinson, 1810; Geo. Carey, 1810; N. B. BAPTIST CHURCH.

The Rockport Baptist Church was organized May 17, 1842. It grew out of meetings held in a little brick school-house situated under the brow of Diamond Hill, in what was then termed Goose River Village. The church began its career with twelve disciples, who brought their letters of dismission from other churches for this purpose. All of this little band have now gone to their long rest.

The present building was erected in 1856, and was rebuilt, and re-dedicated June 7, 1888. It is situated on the corner of Commercial and Amesbury streets.

The following is the list of pastors who have served the church, with their dates of appointment, generally serving until their successors' arrival.

- C. C. Long, 1842.
- Winthrop O. Thomas, 1845.
- Job Washburn, 1848.
- James Williams, 1852.
- Holmes Chipman, 1855.
- James Williams, 1857.
- Asa Perkins, 1860.
- Rev. Mr. Emerson, 1863-4.
- Rev. Mr. Lewy, —
- Rev. Mr. Holman, —
- D. C. Bixby, 1872.
- F. W. Ryder, D. D., 1876.
- C. M. G. Harwood, 1881.
- F. A. Snow, 1888.
- Henry B. Woods, 1891.

- Walter P. Bartlett, 1904.

ADVENT CHURCH.

The Advents in the place organized a church society here Feb. 24, 1892, and erected a house of worship soon after. Rev. Fred Johnson is the only one who has served the society as the regular pastor, remaining here for three years. Since that time the pulpit has been filled by traveling evangelists and preachers from the surrounding towns.

EDUCATIONAL NOTES

The first school house of which we have any knowledge was situated on Capt. Jesse Hosmer's land. This was a frame building, part of which was afterwards used by Mr. Coburn Tyler as a dwelling house. Liberal appropriations were made by the newly incorporated town for school expenditures. Among the early schoolmasters here were: Asa Hosmer, in 1794, Robert Portersfield and Benj. Stetson following. Rev. Joshua Hall, the local Methodist preacher in 1802, taught the school for a season, teaching one term at the Harbor, then one at the River. Gradually but surely the interest of the residents became more manifested by the increased support they gave the early schools. New houses were built, new schools established, and new and improved textbooks used.

In 1851 an academy was opened attended by 68 pupils during the first term, but their hope of receiving a grant of land from the State Legislature was not realized and the school was suspended.

The present efficient system of instruction in Rockport shows the careful and progressive management the work has received. The present schools are modeled after the best schools in the state, are well supplied with maps, globes, laboratory equipment, etc. The village schools are divided into four grades; primary, intermediate, grammar and high, with two schools of each of the lower grades. The West

Rockport district has been divided and the schools graded as efficiently as possible in the two schools now formed there. According to the school census taken in April, 1903, there were in town 654 scholars between the ages of 4 and 21. The report showed an average attendance of about 334 during the past school year. The rural districts are generally small, but do good work.

With the advent of the high school the efficiency of the local school was greatly augmented, offering to the town's youth the privilege of completing a course of study, or of following a College Preparatory course. The school now offers a four years' course as a fitting school and is under the care of H. L. Withee, who has given such eminent satisfaction during the past year.

Census, 1904.

The population of the town of Rockport has been arranged herewith in families where that arrangement has been possible. In these families, in addition to the resident living members, the names of the non-resident members are included. It should be borne in mind that this plan does not include the names of all former residents of this town, as the names of the non-residents appear only when one or both the parents are still living in the town. At the end of the Census will be found the names of non-residents with their present addresses, when such addresses have been given to us. The non-residents are indicated by the (*).

Following the names of the population is the occupation. To designate the occupations we have used the more common abbreviations and contractions. Some of these follow: Farmer—far; carpenter—car; railroad service—R R ser; student, a member of an advanced institution of learning—stu; pupil, a member of a lower grade of schools—pl; housework—ho; laborer—lab; physician and surgeon—phy & sur; clergyman—clerg; merchant—mer; teacher—tr; blacksmith—blk; clerk—cl; book-keeper—bk kpr; lawyer—law; mechanic—mech; engineer—eng; insurance—ins; maker—mkr; worker—w'kr; work—wk; shoe shop work—s s work; lime trimmer—lime trim; ship fastener—s fast; sea captain—s capt; restaurant—restau; theatrical work—theat wk; ship carpenter—s car; laundry—laun; President Rockport Ice Co.—Pres R Ice Co.; marine—mar; lime burner—lime bur; music teacher—mus tr; stevedore—steve; dress maker—dr mk; electrician—elec; fisherman—fish; electric railroad service—elec R R ser; rigger—rig; master rigger—m rig; business—bus; wheelwright—whw; justice peace—j p.
